

Peppard Flat Earth Society

After transferring their allegiance from The Dog to The Red Lion in 1976, a select band of residents from Church Lane would, every Friday night, over a few pints argue that black was white and even that the Earth was not round: hence the formation of the Peppard Flat Earth Society (PFES).

In 2013, after striding up to and struggling back from the pub they decided that the telephone kiosk outside the school needed some tlc and a complete refurbishment was undertaken. It is now time for another makeover and this task has been passed to the Parish Council, which some years ago purchased the kiosk from BT for £1.

At least one member of the PFES had been in attendance every Friday night in the Red Lion for the past 43 years. So what to do once the pub closed? Not afraid to embrace the latest technology, on-line Zoom meetings continued during lockdown but the atmosphere and banter were sadly missing.

The Unicorn is now the pub of choice and the PFES members have received a warm welcome as they continue their socially distanced repartee in the pub garden.

Alan Smith